NO DEMOCRATIC TARIFF BILL. had been resting at Pahvamagat started

The Democratic members of the senate finance committee have done wisely in deciding not to offer a substitute for the finance committee bill; whether they have done so wisely in deciding to offer amendments that will reduce the rates proposed but still make them ligher than the Wilson bill rates, is not quite so certain. It is also said that they regard the committee's bill as a revenue producer and that it will supply ample revenue to meet all the needs of the government, and this Sunday, per year.

The Boston Herald says the stories of speculation by senators in sugar stock are circulated as often as the sugar schedule is up for revision by congress, and there seems to be no good reason to doubt that considerable sums of money have been made by some of those senators who had advance information concerning the senate finance committee's dealing with this item. It has happened before, and it is quite likely to happen again. Some of the senators have no hesitation about availing themselves of their excellent opportunities for making money in this way. Salt Lake City postoffice seem to be more poetic than prosaic. Postmaster Bar-ratt asserts that several of his subordinates touch the tuneful lyre with fetching effect, and the very atmosphere is loaded with poesy. The Springheid Republican of recent date publishes one of the productions of N. Albert Sherman, a clerk

O Hellas for a glant' part in mystic cent in of the past! A flashing star, a meteor. Amidst the ancient rayless throng: Thy glorious feats of peace and war Are ours in story and in song.

For us immortal Homer sang,
Great Pindar soared and Piato taught,
Demosthenes Phillippics hang—
For all the ages Phidias wrought,
Through tyrants rule and dark intrigue
Thy mad career, to fall at last
The prey of foreign foe and league,
Thy fame a memory of the past.
For what they wert in ancient day;
For all thou art, and yet might be,
Shoulds't Christendom be proud to say,
O Greece, dear motherland, be free!

Where lies thy hope? Proud Austrian,
We know the vaunted chilm of thine
Of Hipsburg house and jeweled crown
Inherited by right divine
From the Augustant; it is just,
No Caesar of the ancient day
With Nero's hate and Tarquin's lust,
E'er ruled with more despotic sway.
Oh that one like the Coreican
Could thunder at Vienna's gate!
Then mightst then on thy tottering throne
Feel for a suffering sister state.

Dost seek, O Greece, the Muscovite,
Kinsman in faith and foeman flerce
Of Islam? a perildious knight.
Who tilta his lance in thrust and tierce
At liberty; with knout and scars
Alike for subject and for foe;
His realin girt round with prison bars
Across a thousand leagues of snow.
Ah! vain the quest; no hope is there;
Turn to thy vine-clad hills again;
And bid the surly Russian bear
Go seek and keep his frozen den.

How stands fair Albion, whilom guard Of Christian cross and liberty. Where erat the warrior vied with bard To lift their hanners to the sky? O freedom loving German, where Art thou in Hellas hour of need? And France, the brave, the desborair, Leap forward thou to chivairous deed! Those lands are pinioned as of old By selfiah interest and fear—Non-intervention, stern and cold, Creed of the weatern hemisphere.

Upon thy valor and the right,
Rely, O Greece, when heaven sent
Full oft the weak have won the light
Against the heavier armament.
Thou God of hattle, by thy power
Help him restore the ancient line,
And lift to crown each mosque and tower
The blazing cross of Constantine!
Nor till thy strong arm overwhelm
The hordes of Islam, and fair Greece
Claim and rebuild the wasted realin,
Shall waring Europe be at peace.
